By accepting these terms, you confirm your role as either the owner or authorized representative of the website to be scrutinized by our automated web security system. This service is engineered to conduct a thorough analysis of websites to detect potential security vulnerabilities. You acknowledge and understand that this examination of your website may reveal flaws or vulnerabilities within your website's security architecture. Therefore, you agree to assume complete responsibility for any direct or indirect outcomes arising from this analysis.

Furthermore, you consent that any data gathered from this analysis will be responsibly utilized, conforming to our Privacy Policy and all relevant privacy and data security regulations, including but not limited to the new state data privacy laws taking effect from 2023. These laws, inspired by the EU's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), assert that individuals effectively own their personal information, thus have the legal right to control its usage.

As part of our commitment to data security, we uphold the rights of individuals to request access to, correct, transfer, delete their personal information, decide whether their data may be sold or used for targeted advertising, and appeal a business's denial of their request. We also adhere to principles such as privacy by design, record-keeping, data minimization, transparency, informed consent, legitimate uses, best cybersecurity practices, and data breach notifications, among others.

We recognize the crucial importance of employee training in data protection. Our employees are regularly trained and updated on the best data protection practices and relevant regulations, including the GDPR. This ensures that your personal data is handled with the utmost care and competence.

In the unlikely event of a data breach, we have implemented a GDPR-compliant notification procedure. If your personal data were to be compromised, we will inform you without undue delay. This notification will include details about the nature of the breach, the possible consequences, the measures we have taken to mitigate risks, and the steps you may need to take to further protect your data.

We strongly encourage you to familiarize yourself with our Privacy Policy to fully understand our practices and safeguards in data management. Please note that it will not be possible to proceed without accepting these terms and conditions.
